Logbook cutting test - proof report

PClaimAssist research tests - how accurately the Logbook Reader cuts each logbook row into its categories - generated 2026-11-05

Your check. Cuts tagged by a person on the review page (research_tests.logbook_cutting_review): scanner: 990 of 990 cuts tagged - 71.62% correct, 91.11% correct or partly; phone: 990 of 990 cuts tagged - 59.19% correct, 67.98% correct or partly. Section Your check has the details; the rest of this report shows the earlier visual check and the pictures.

Earlier visual check (by Claude, before your check). Proper cuts (one whole entry, its own column, nothing missing): 80.0% of the 990 cuts on the scanner scans (91.11% counting cuts of the right column that clip part of the writing) and 57.58% on the phone photos (67.68% with clipped). Row numbering is a separate problem: on the scanner every cut got the right row number; on the phone only 64.29% did - several phone pages are cut properly but numbered one to three rows off, which pairs one patient's details with another's diagnoses. Proper and on the right row: 80.0% scanner, 31.62% phone.
The left page is cut well on the scanner except the Case number, which often loses its first digit; on the right page the grid was placed one step too far right for 4 of the 10 writers (Reason for admission holds the delivery date).

How this was judged. Every cut was looked at, in the page mosaics in this report, and judged by Claude (inputs/logbook_cutting_visual_check.csv) - the earlier check, used as the suggestion on the review page, where a person confirms or changes each cut. The judgement is a checkable input: please confirm it against the pictures, correct the CSV where needed, and rerun.

Proper cuts % = proper / all cuts x 100 - how well the cutting works. 'Proper or clipped' also counts cuts of the right column that lose part of the writing (e.g. the first digit of the case number). Right row number % = cuts numbered as the right logbook row / cuts holding an entry. Proper and right row % = both.

2. How the test works and how to read the pictures

The Logbook Reader finds each patient's row on the scanned spread and cuts it into one picture per category: Case number, Admitted, Patient name, Birthday and Address on the left page; Reason for admission, Delivered, Final diagnosis and Went home on the right. This test checks those cuts - the field mapping of the logbook - on the handwriting test's runs (the same 10 writers, scanner and phone, the same pictures; nothing is re-read).

Visual check (the result). Each cut gets two judgements. First, the cut itself:

Cut	Meaning
Proper	one whole entry, its own column, nothing missing
Clipped	its own column, but part of the writing is outside the cut
Wrong column	holds (part of) another column's writing
Half of two entries	the bottom of one entry and the top of the next
Empty paper	below the last entry - nothing to cut
Not found	no cut was made for that row

Second, the row number the system gave it: Right, or Off by N - a proper cut of another row's entry. The left and right pages are joined by row number, so a page numbered one row off pairs every patient's details with the next patient's diagnoses, even though each cut is proper.

The pictures. A page mosaic shows every cut of one page: a column per category, a row per logbook entry, framed green (proper), purple (proper, but numbered as another row), orange (clipped) or red (wrong column, half of two entries, empty paper, not found). A shifted column or a row off by one shows at a glance. A row sheet shows one row as the system found it on the scan, then each of its cuts with what is written in the logbook (answer key), what PaddleOCR read in it, the visual verdict and the automatic one.

Automatic judging (support). PaddleOCR's raw reading of each cut is compared with what is written in every category of the same page, in the same row and the rows above and below; a cut is "wrong" when another category or row clearly matches better. Section 4 shows where it agrees with the visual check.

3. What goes wrong, with pictures

On these pages the cut for Reason for admission holds the end of the reason and the delivery date and time; Delivered holds the start of the final diagnosis; Final diagnosis loses its first letters. It happens on every row of the page. Below: W10 (shifted) and W01 (correct) for comparison.

It is the grid, not the writer. W05's same handwritten page is cut correctly from the phone photo but shifted on the scanner scan (and W07 the other way round). So the column positions the system places on the right page are not reliable from scan to scan.

W05 - phone scan - right page: every cut, by category

3.2 Left page: the Case number loses its first digit

The case number is written at the very left of the page. Its cut often starts a little too far right, so the first digit (W05, W06, W09) or half the number (W07) is outside it. W02's whole left page is placed slightly too far left, which clips the first character of Case number, Admitted and Patient name instead.

3.3 Phone photos: proper cuts, but rows numbered off

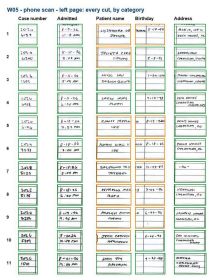

On many phone pages the cutting itself works: each cut holds one whole entry in its own column (W03, W04, W06, W08, W09 and W10 left pages, most right pages, and all of W05). What goes wrong is the row numbering: the left page is numbered one to three rows off from the right page (purple), and the empty paper below the last entry is cut as rows. Two phone left pages are cut badly - every cut half an entry off, holding the bottom of one patient and the top of the next (W01, W02) - and some rows are not found at all (W01, W06).

W01, phone, left page - half of two entries in every cut, rows 7-11 not found

4. Automatic judging vs the visual check

What the automatic judging said for the cuts in each visual verdict. It never called a correct cut wrong, but it misses most wrong-column cuts: with a poor reading, a cut holding part of two columns matches neither clearly, so it says "can't tell". That is why the result is the visual check.

5. Is it usable?

Part	Result
Scanner, left page: Admitted, Patient name, Birthday, Address	correct, except W02's first characters (clipped)
Scanner, left page: Case number	60% whole; the rest lose the first digit(s)
Scanner, right page: Went home	100% correct
Scanner, right page: Reason, Delivered, Final diagnosis	60% correct - shifted for 4 of 10 writers
Phone photos: the cutting	57.58% proper (67.68% with clipped)
Phone photos: row numbering	64.29% right - left page often one to three rows off

Scanner: usable with the review step, not on its own. 80.0% of cuts are proper and 91.11% hold the right column, all on the right rows. The review page shows staff each cut, so a clipped digit or a shifted right page is visible and can be fixed there - but on a shifted page, three of the nine fields need retyping for every patient. Phone photos: the cutting partly works (57.58% proper), the row numbering does not (only 31.62% proper and on the right row): a page numbered one row off silently pairs one patient's details with another's diagnoses, so phone photos are not safe to use as they are.

What would fix most of it (for the team to decide): place the right-page columns from the printed column lines of each scan rather than from fixed positions; start the Case number cut a little further left; for phone photos, find the rows from the printed lines after straightening the photo, and refuse a photo whose rows do not line up between the two pages.
